

How Legal Insurance Works Compared to Health Insurance

Not sure how participating in an attorney network works – or how it will help you grow your practice? See how clients work with attorneys in a legal insurance network, much like doctors who participate in a health insurance network.

A plan member has a legal issue that needs to be addressed by an attorney.

A plan member has a medical issue that needs to be addressed by a doctor.

They go online or call their insurance company to determine coverage.

An in-network attorney consults with the plan member online, over the phone or in person.

An in-network doctor consults with the plan member.

The attorney meets with the plan member to figure out next steps, such as legal advice, document creation, court proceeding and more.

The doctor meets with the plan member to figure out next steps, such as prescription drugs, follow-up visits or surgery/medical procedures.

The attorney submits a claim to ARAG and receives payment within 10 business days according to an established fee structure.

The doctor submits a claim to the insurance company and receives payment according to an established fee structure.

The plan member may want to periodically meet with an attorney (especially after a life event) to review their legal matters and plan ahead to prevent serious legal issues from affecting them and their loved ones.

The plan member may want to schedule an annual check-up with their doctor to review their health and work to prevent medical issues.

The Benefits of Joining the ARAG Attorney Network

When employees enrolled in an ARAG legal plan turn to you for legal help - in the areas of law you practice - it can boost your client base and increase potential revenue for your firm.
