

TRUE OR FALSE

DO YOU NEED AN ATTORNEY FOR THIS?

Knowing when you need an attorney can be tricky. You want to make sure you're protected, but you also don't want to add unnecessary bills to your regular expenses. At the same time, you don't want to wait too long before seeking assistance.

Here's a rundown of some common issues, and whether or not you might need an attorney's assistance.

WILLS AND TRUSTS

If you plan on making a will, you want to make sure an attorney is assisting you in the process. You don't want to make an error that you won't be around to fix when the will is read someday.

How an Attorney Can Help:

- Considering what kind of trust to choose
- Legal advice

SPEEDING TICKETS

If you get a ticket for breaking the speed limit by a minor amount, you probably don't need to get an attorney involved.

How an Attorney Can Help:

- If the ticket was for a speed 25 miles per hour over the limit, your license might be in danger and your insurance rates may be affected.
- You can fight the ticket yourself in court, but a qualified attorney will mount the best defense.

DUI

If you are facing a charge of driving under the influence, you definitely want legal representation. The fines, the possibility of having your license suspended or even facing jail time, can all have major financial repercussions.

How an Attorney Can Help:

- Get an attorney involved early to make sure you're protected as much as possible.

DIVORCE

Even in no-contest states, divorce can get messy. If you have children, there may be custody issues, and the division of assets and property can be just as complicated.

How an Attorney Can Help:

- You can try to reach a compromise outside of litigation, but seeking the advice of an attorney early on will help you avoid costly mistakes.

A FENDER BENDER

Things can get complicated here. If you and a neighbor back into each other, you're probably fine exchanging insurance information and letting the insurance companies sort things out.

How an Attorney Can Help:

- If either of you is experiencing physical pain or notices any lingering issues down the line, you might need to consider further options. Legal insurance can give you more options if the need for legal action arises.
